CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

As a part curriculum we are planned to visit Equatorial Geophysical Research laboratory on 30-09-2022 with permission of Prof Mrs J.R. Sheeba, head of the department of physics and research centre. We started our journey from our college at 7:02 am and reached there at 9:00 am. We learned about Equatorial Geophysical Research laboratory project and finally returned to our college at 5:00 pm

1.1 Geophysical Research Laboratory

Made rich beyond any man's wildest dreams through wise investments and the booming steel industry, Andrew Carnegie sought to share his wealth to advance knowledge and education. Over his lifetime, Carnegie had contributed to just causes associated with literature, education, and the arts. In 1901, he became interested in science. America's top minds immediately sprang into action, bombarding Carnegie with hundreds of different opinions about how to donate his money. Initially, Carnegie planned to fund a great new American university for science, but after a meeting with Daniel C. Gilman, the soon to be named President of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, and John S. Billings on November

EQUATORIAL GEOPHYSICAL RESEARCH LABOURATORY

2.1 EGRL IN TIRUNELVELI

Fig 2.1 EGRL in Tirunelveli

The Equatorial Geophysical Research Laboratory (EGRL), the regional centre of IIG, started its activities in 1991, when an experiment for measuring short-period geomagnetic field fluctuations was carried out for a short time in one of the rented houses at Krishnapuram, a village located 11 km from Tirunelveli, on the Tirunelveli-Tiruchendur Highway. Fig 2.1 is situated close to the magnetic equator (the dip angle being 1.75°N) (8.7°N , 77.8°E geographic) over an area of more than 35 acres near the village, Krishnapuram, the Centre was intended to house multi-disciplinary experiments for the measurements of electric and magnetic fields originating in the near-Earth environment.

A modern Library with a wide section of books (currently around 500 in number) on geomagnetism, atmospheric sciences and ionospheric and magnetospheric physics among others, supplemented by around 25 reputed scientific journals in the disciplines of interest, is part of the Centre that also houses a well-equipped electronics laboratory for fabrication and maintenance of instruments required for the experimental programmes.
